"The advancement of technology is based on making it fit in so that you don't really even notice it, so, it is part of everyday life."

Dear Readers,

The above quote by Bill Gates, Co-founder of Microsoft is really significant today. For the last few years technology had started stretching itself in our lives making it inevitable. Now, technology is finally being integrated in education. During the recent past we have witnessed the technology which has fit in our lives in such a way that we barely notice. During these trying times too, when everything went under lockdown, the studies continued, school buildings closed but there was no closure for education.

Month of June is known for the vacation month, when all activities in school come to standstill. But this time it was not so. All activities went on as usual. With the help and guidance of the teachers our students participated in various quizzes and activities, viz. Tudubuddy, WWE, World Environment Day, International Yoga Day and many more.

The most satisfying thing was attending online session of "Science of Spirituality" on "Building Bridges of Love and Kindness". It was really blissful to see all the children in deep meditation which sometimes we miss in regular school days. I would never advocate for virtual classes over the regular ones as human touch sometimes gets missed but when there was a big question posed in front of us WHAT NOW? This came as a blessing.

Let me share a story with you which is quite relevant in today's scenario. The story, 'The Fun They Had', written by Isaac Asimov, first appeared on 1st Dec, 1951 in a children's newspaper. It is about computerized home schooling and what children miss out by not being in school together. The story is set in future when books and schools as we have now perhaps will not exist. Two students of that period about 150 years advance from today found a printed book. They talk about the schools and books of the old period. They compare those schools with those of their own which are situated in their homes and have mechanical teachers to teach them. They think it was great fun to study in the schools of old times when all the kids in the area went there to learn the same thing by a computer.

Isn't it too strange that the writer imagined e-classes, e-schooling, about 70 years back, which we are experiencing now. Dear Readers, where there is a will, way opens up by itself. Nothing can prove to be a deterrent on the way we choose to go forward.....

HAPPY READING.....

World Environment Day

The STAR PUBLIC SCHOOL has wonderfully managed to pull off this brilliant initiative in this time of world crisis by engaging students in this manner when schools are all shut, and they are trying to learn in the confines of their homes. Even under the given circumstance, this initiative has enabled them to see beyond, to think and reflect deeper on issues affecting our lives such as the environment which needs much action and attention. Perhaps it has also helped some of them discover their hidden talents in the art of writing.

World Environment Day was celebrated on June 5 at STARPUBLIC SCHOOL to spread awareness about environment conservation as well as taking better actions to fight climate change. The children of STAR PUBLIC SCHOOL have given their best slogans for World Environment Day 2021 that you must check out!
